

- A. The numbers generated are pseudo-random since there is a sequence since the number is generated from another number, but the sequence is difficult to notice when it is looked at.
- B. Using the current system time to generate a seed will in fact generate truly random numbers since it is almost impossible to find out the exact second when the number was generated.